About 90 people attended a reception at the Elks Lodge in West Sacramento as a "welcome" celebration to Channel 13 anchors Stan Atkinson and Jennifer Whitney.

Atkinson is new to KOVR-13, which is based in West Sacramento, but is regarded as the region's best known newscaster.

The event was a "great success," said Steve Roberts of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, which organized it. Phil Crawford served as master of ceremonies.

City to honor former local for rescuing kids from apartment fire

A former West Sacramento man will be honored tonight by the West Sacramento for heroism which may have saved the life of a local boy during an apartment fire.

Clarence Smith, 24, was returning to his Todhunter Dr. apartment on Sept. 23 when he smelled smoke.

"I looked upstairs," he said. "Out of the corner of my eye I saw a fire in an apartment."

Concerned about friends who lived there went upstairs.

"I kicked open a door and yelled, 'is anybody in here?' I heard a little boy screaming and crying in the smoke. He couldn't get out because the doorknob was hot."

Smith carried 4-year old Anthony Lopez to safety. He then kicked in the door of an apartment across the hall and took a 7-year old outside, away from the fire.

Both children had been alone in their apartments, he said.

"It's not every day I can save a kid's life. "If it hadn't been for me, he might not be alive, and I

Johannessen defeats McGowan

■ McGowan leads in Yolo County, but Johannessen wins 4th district senate race handily

By Steve Marschke

With a comfortable win over Mike McGowan following a decidedly uncomfortable campaign, State Senator Maurice Johannessen says he is optimistic about the state's future.

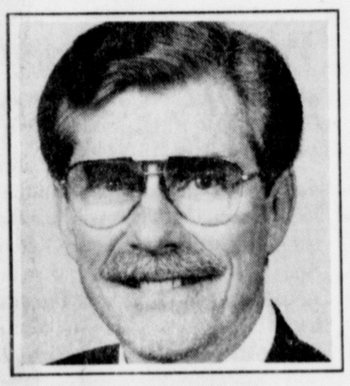

"There are enough people, even on the Democratic side, who understand what needs to be done," said the Fourth District Republican. "I'm optimistic, or I wouldn't have run."

Johannessen reported that his opponent, West Sacramento native McGowan, "threw away" over a million dollars on his campaign, with a great deal of financial backing from Democratic party principals. Johannessen added that his own campaign has spent upwards of $650,000, including over $100,000 of Johannessen's own money.

Final campaign budget tallies are not yet available.

Much of the money went towards advertisements -- including direct mail to registered voters -- seeking to denigrate the opposition. At various times during the campaign, Johannessen made issues of a McGowan drunk driving arrest and sought to link him to Patrick Purdy, the gunman who killed five children in a Stockton schoolyard.

For his part, McGowan's campaign sought to portray Johannessen as a radical, right-wing "nut," who favored child molesters and wished to turn California into a "Wild West" region where everybody carried a gun.

Maurice Johannessen: elected to another term as State Senator, Fourth District

Michael McGowan: will finish term on Yolo County Board of Supervisors

McGowan could not be reached for comment Tuesday; an clerk for the Board of Supervisors in Yolo County (of which he is currently a member) said he is out of town on official business.

But Johannessen, posting a 54.6 percent to 45.4 percent victory, was talkative.

He said he didn't think his win had much to do with the national tide of Republican victories and anger against Democrats.

"I don't think it had anything to do with a Republican revolt," he commented. "In a local race, like this, it has to do more with individuals."

He characterized the campaign with McGowan as "a very difficult campaign; a very personal kind of campaign, unfortunately.

"The people in the district had faith in me and rejected a slanderous, dirty campaign."

Craig Reynolds, McGowan's campaign consultant, disagreed with Johannessen's conclusions that McGowan waged a dirty campaign.

"This is typical," said Reynolds. "I think the voters know they got five negative pieces of mail (from Johannessen) in the last five days. . . Maurice Johannessen didn't send out a single positive piece of mail in the whole campaign."

Reynolds also said that political parties were a major factor in the race.

"This was a tough election for Democrats," he commented, adding that conservative regions and voters also had a far higher turnout at the polls.

"The turnout was 59 percent in our base, Yolo County. It was 76 percent in (the more conservative area of) Glenn County, 66 percent in Shasta, and in the 70s throughout the conservative areas. Republicans came out to vote."

Johannessen said that he was looking forward to the coming year in the state senate.

He said some of the priorities of his fellow Republicans, who now have control over the state legislature, will be workers' compensation reform, education, welfare reform and fighting crime.

Despite losing the race overall, McGowan led Johannessen in West Sacramento by a 63-37 margin; in Yolo County overall, McGowan led with about 60 percent of the vote.

McGowan was West Sacramento's first mayor.

Johannessen is a Redding resident.

Controversy in Souport:

Planners to vote on 'Cheaper!' store

By Steve Marschke

The controversy over a proposed "Cheaper!" store in West Sacramento's Southport area will return Thursday evening as the city planning commission gets a chance to vote on the project.

Opponents have questioned the appropriateness of what they consider to be a "liquor" store and "convenience" store near some of the city's more affluent neighborhoods.

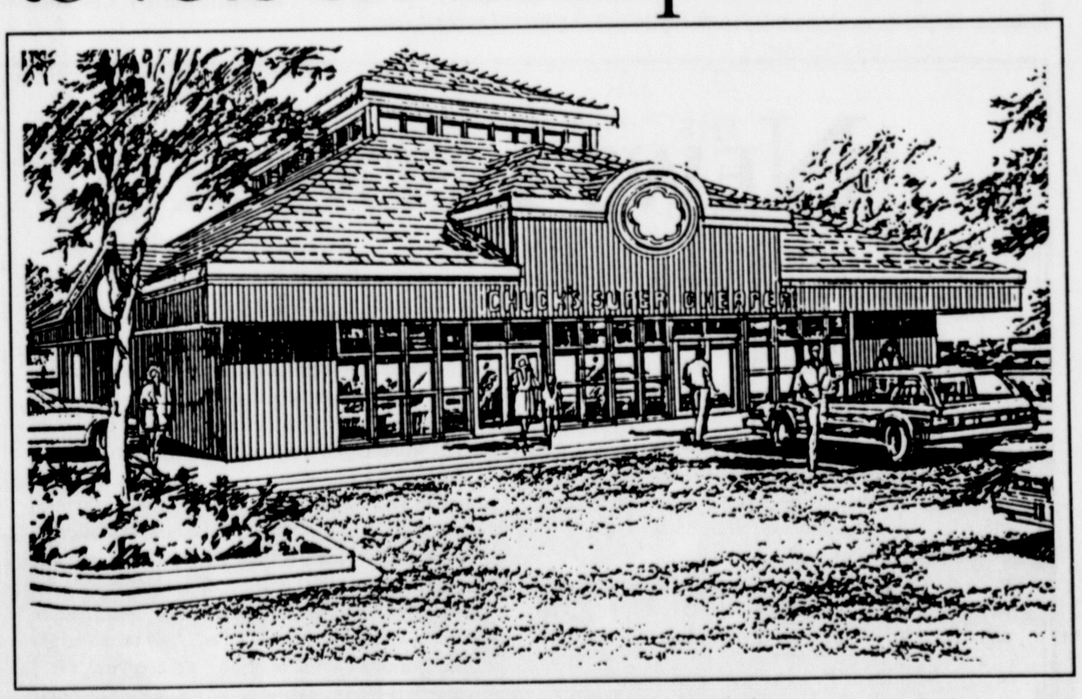

But John Roscoe, principal of The Customer Company, which owns the chain of stores, is at pains to describe the store in other terms.

"We don't like to be called a convenience store," he commented. "We think of ourselves as a discount food store. We think it is libelous to call it a convenience store."

Roscoe said the company has moved away from the convenience store format, which tends to offer a small selection at high prices, and towards the "discount food store format."

"Our goal is to sell 80 percent of what people need to 80 percent of the people," he said. "We're not going to have roasts in our meat department, but we are going to have steaks, hamburgers and chicken, and a limited produce department."

The store will also sell liquor and cigarettes, which some Southport residents have said will bring down the neighborhood. About 180 of them have signed petitions opposing the new store, with many saying that allowing a Cheaper! store into the neighborhood will preempt a major supermarket from locating in Southport in the future.

Company artist's rendering of proposed store

City planner Beth Tincher said the proposed Cheaper! store will enclose about 8,000 feet -- a size comparable to the city's 15th St. Market farther north.

"The standard convenience store size is about 2,500 or 3,000 square feet, like the usual Circle K or 7-11," Tincher added.

Roscoe and other store officials argue that alcoholic beverages are merely one item among many in the proposed store, just as Californians consume wine and other alcoholic beverages as one item among many in their lifestyle.

"This is an 8,000 square foot store. You can't run an 8,000 square foot store selling liquor and cigarettes."

Roscoe's company is distributing hundreds of videos to West Sacramento residents showing off other newer Cheaper! stores and promoting the company. He said that the company's newest stores, including one in Woodland in East Street, are constructed to a new, upscale image.

Dan Amegin, president of the Southport Homeowners Association, said he has not had a chance to review the latest information the company and from city staff concerning the proposed store, but he and his organization have yet to be convinced.

The organization has particularly questioned the traffic impacts of the store, saying it might create more traffic across the bridge by luring customers from outside Southport.

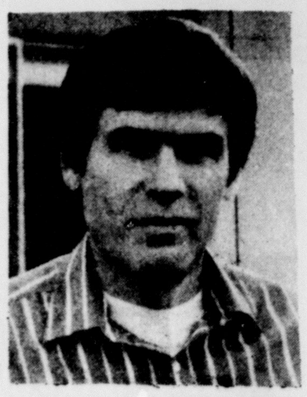

A preliminary traffic study, performed by a consultant for Cheaper!, claimed that would not be true.

Public pressure helped force a new study, contracted by the city of West Sacramento. That study presumes that 60 percent of the new store's customers

Fisher family undergoes ordeal of family portrait

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I'm not exactly sure how it happened so fast, but three-quarters of my kids are suddenly teenagers. Not only do they have their own opinions on every subject known to man (none of which ever seem to agree with any of mine), but they also have their own set of priorities and very complicated personal schedules.

Among those priorities are such things as making and returning as many phone calls as humanly possible in one day to their friends and current love interests; creating very interesting and often quite believable excuses when questions like "Why haven't you cleaned up your rooms, taken out the trash, or picked up the dog poop?" are asked; and making absolutely sure that they are never--and I mean never--available for anything which might even resemble a family outing.

With all of that in mind, I was not the least bit surprised by the somewhat dramatic reaction my wife got last Saturday morning when she bravely announced at breakfast that she had scheduled a family portrait to be taken at high noon in one of those Olan Mills Studios.

"You did what?" asked my oldest son in disbelief, his eyes as wide as saucers.

"We haven't had a family portrait taken since Kyle (our 8-year-old son) was born," she explained. "He's going to think he's not even a part of the family."

"Well, as far as I'm concerned," interjected Paul, who still can't seem to get over the fact that he has to share a bedroom with his younger brother, "he's NOT a part of the family."

"Mom," yelled Kyle, taking a swing at Paul, "I am too a part of the family!"

"But I haven't even washed my hair," said my daughter. "Why didn't you tell us about this earlier?"

"Yeah," said Ty, "I've got big plans for this afternoon."

"Look," said my wife with conviction, "I told each and every one of you about this two weeks ago and I don't think it's too much to ask for all of you to spend one hour of your time once every ten years getting your picture taken." Then, knowing full well that there was no one in the room who wanted to go and get a family portrait taken less than me, she looked directly at me and said, "Isn't that right, Daryl?"

I thought over my options for a few moments--which included such things as preparing my own meals and undergoing the dreaded silent treatment for the next couple of weeks--and said, "It's not going to kill any of us--we're all going."

"But Dad, all of my pants have holes in the knees," said Ty, obviously grabbing for one last straw.

"Don't worry--they're not going to photograph your knees," I assured him.

With that, everyone seemed to resign themselves to the fact that like it or not, it was going to be family picture day. We all climbed into the old Chrysler--which is the only vehicle we own that has enough room for all of us--and began motoring our way out to a studio just off Stockton Boulevard.

"Why did you choose a place way out here?" asked Paul, shaking his head.

"Yeah," said Ty as he looked out the window at a couple of transients who were standing on a rundown street corner taking turns guzzling down some kind of liquid, "who wants to get their picture taken and be in a drive-by--shooting on the same day?"

When I finally pulled up in front of the picture studio, I happened to notice that the water temperature gauge on the dash panel had turned bright red. "Ty," I said, "you're the one who has been driving this car--when's the last time you put some water in it?"

"You never told me I was supposed to do that," he said, using one of his very favorite sayings.

After I had let the car cool down for a few minutes, I lifted up the hood and discovered that there wasn't a drop of water in the radiator. "We're going to be late for our appointment," said my worried wife. "Can't we deal with this after we've had our pictures taken?"

"Why don't me and Paul go buy some bottled water at that place down there," suggested Ty, pointing to a Mom and Pop grocery store off in the distance.

"Don't anybody move!" ordered my wife. "We're going to get this family portrait taken if it's the very last thing I ever do!"

Anyway, after some really weird lady who seemed to have an advanced degree in goofy things to say to make people smile for the camera had mercifully finished snapping our pictures, I hurried back out to the car and once again lifted up the hood. "What's the problem?" suddenly asked a very kind elderly Asian man who apparently owned the little fish market next to the picture studio.

"My son doesn't believe in keeping water in the radiator," I explained.

"Oh--that's no problem," he said, smiling and motioning for me to follow him.

We went into his store, he took a brand new big boiling kettle he was trying to sell off one of his shelves, filled it with water back where an employee was energetically hacking off a fish's head and insisted on being the one to haul it back out to my car. After he had filled my radiator up to the brim, he looked around at all my dressed-up kids and said, "Getting the family picture taken today, huh?"

"Yes," I said.

"Our family did that awhile back, too," he said with a warm smile. "It's a very nice idea."

"And thank God my wife only gets it once every decade," I said as he smiled even wider and nodded his head in agreement.

Last round of flu shots

County health officials are encouraging people 60 and older to take advantage of low cost flu shot clinics this fall to protect themselves from influenza this winter. The 1994-95 influenza vaccine provides protection against A/Texas, A/Shangdong, B/Panama strains. Persons allergic to eggs should not be given the flu shot.

The last opportunity to receive a flu shot in West Sacramento is today, with a clinic to be provided at the West Sacramento Senior Center, 664 Cummins Way, between 1 and 3 p.m.

If clients have Medicare Part B, the Public Health Department can bill Medicare for these shots. Please bring your Medicare card with you.

Raiders' efforts come up short in 37-14 season-ender

By Chuck Robinson

Coach Rod Massey said, "I am disappointed not to get to win, as I felt sure we could beat Golden Sierra, but I'm very proud of this team's efforts. They played hard to the end and never gave up. I think we had a good season."

J.V.'s Lose to Golden Sierra

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The "Showdown at the Stick" was won by the 49ers, as Steve Young and the 49er defense finally got the monkey off their backs.

It was more like a gorilla!!

The 49er defense held Emmitt Smith to 78 yards rushing and had three sacks as Troy Aikman was intercepted three times.

The 49ers celebrated their long-awaited day with a 21-14 victory in front of a record crowd of 69,014.

The 49ers' biggest play came at the goal line with 6:10 to play, when safety Merton Hanks made his second interception of the game. The 49ers then drove 87 yards for the winning score, as Steve Young hit Brent Jones on a 13-yard roll out for the TD with 2:32 left in the game.

The 49ers (8-1) gained a tie-breaker edge over Dallas (8-2) in the race for the home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. Philadelphia (7-3) and Minnesota (7-3) both lost this weekend.

The 49ers are at home next week against the Rams, who are 14-point underdogs.

The Cowboys also are two-touchdown favorites at home next week against the Redskins, who had two weeks to prepare for Dallas.

The Sacramento Kings are 3-1 and are playing like they might be a playoff contender! They beat the Sonics in Seattle and won their first two home games against the Phoenix Suns and Atlanta Hawks!

The Kings are 3-1 for the third consecutive year, so starting the season 4-1 would be special, since the Kings haven't done it since 1974. Unfortunately, the Kings play at Houston next and at Dallas Thursday night!!

The Kings next home game is Saturday, November 20 at 6 p.m. against Cleveland.

West Sac's Willie Jorrin (8-0) remained unbeaten, winning a six-round decision last Thursday at the Reno Hilton.

See ya next week!!

News-Ledger Editorial

Few true bright spots in state and local ballot results

Oh, what a depressing election.

The main event turned out to be a debate over immigration, and that debate was fueled more by hysteria from both sides than by any kind of reason. The state's incumbent governor rode that furor to his re-election, knowing he could not run on his record, and his main challenger waged a clumsy campaign that gave voters little alternative.

Incumbent Vic Fazio was almost tossed out of Congress by a virtual unknown, and will certainly face a bleak two years stripped of much of his power by the new Republican majority in Congress. Fazio has proved in the past that he can "deliver" (read: bring federal money to his home district, which is known as pork barrelling by those not fortunate to live in the district), but the anti-Democrat fever nearly cost him his seat anyway.

More locally, West Sacramento native Mike McGowan lost his bitter campaign with K. Maurice Johannessen for the Senate, following a war of mailers that left both men dirtied by mudslinging.

One bright point: at least Californians had the delightful opportunity to tell the Philip Morris Company and its tobacco company cronies where to put it. These are the folks who created a false and deceitful campaign which supposedly protected the public from second-hand smoke, and children from tobacco advertising and sales.

After they spent millions of dollars on their campaign, California voters told them resoundingly that they were not quite that stupid, and voted "no" on Prop. 188.

Whenever we have a chance to set limits on how far someone can go to lie and buy an election, it's a good thing.

As for all that negative campaigning:

It has been said quite often in the past week, and bears repeating here, that negative campaigning only works because we let it. As disgusted as we are by all those ads trashing somebody else's candidate, we still listen. It is getting tougher and tougher for anyone to wage a political campaign based on "issues" or the candidate's own record.

Until we learn to vote against anyone who uses such tactics, we will be subjected to more of the same mudslinging in coming elections.

How California's schools may enforce Proposition 187

Acting State Superintendent of Public Instruction William D. Dawson has sent the following memo regarding implementation of Proposition 187 to all county and district superintendents:.

Purpose

Now that Proposition 187 has been enacted by the voters, there are many questions about what school districts should do, especially in light of threatened litigation. This memorandum makes an immediate recommendation and sets forth some longer-term considerations for school boards and school personnel. The California School Boards Association (CSBA), the Association of California School Administrators (ACSA), the California Congress of Parents, Teachers, and Students, Inc. (PTA), the California Federation of Teachers (CFT), and the California Teachers Association (CTA) jointly support my recommendation and urge all school districts to adopt it.

In addition, I urge you to carefully consider the implications raised by this memorandum prior to taking any subsequent action. It is our view that it is better to wait than to rush to enforce Proposition 187.

Recommendation

Pursuant to the language of the initiative itself, there are no affirmative obligations placed upon school districts (or anyone else in the broader K-12 education community) until January 1, 1995.

However, commencing January 1, 1995, school districts are required to start verifying legal status of new enrolling students. Because it is not required by the initiative, it is recommended that school districts do nothing to affirmatively implement the verification requirements of Proposition 187 until at least January 1, 1995. Thereafter, before any action is taken, the other matters addressed by this memorandum should be carefully considered.

Background

Numerous organizations and individuals have indicated that they will file lawsuits attacking the constitutionality of Proposition 187. The California Attorney General and Governor announced they will defend it. The Attorney General has also indicated that instructions relating to enforcement would be provided to local district attorneys. The California Legislative Counsel issued a 43-page opinion on October 28, 1994 about the provisions of Proposition 187. Among its conclusions, the opinion finds that the exclusion of education services violates the equal protection clauses of both the United States and California constitutions. The opinion also concludes that the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA) is violated by Proposition 187, which requires school districts to report violations or suspected violations of immigration law to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, the Attor-

Era of Darkness

I feared the passage of Prop. 187 would usher in an era of darkness. As I look out the window this Wednesday morning after the election, I see the storm clouds gathering.

When I lived in Europe, I was teased and scorned by some for being a Californian. But most people just envied me. The stereotype of Californians was a lively mixture of multicultural color -- trendsetters, warmhearted, laid back, super tolerant people who weren't afraid to live on the cutting edge. I was so proud to hail from the Golden State. Now I am ashamed, so dreadfully ashamed.

My heart aches as I discover some of my friends and acquaintances supported this measure. I will never feel quite the same about these people again. We have been propelled into one of the most derisive, ugly and chaotic periods in our history.

Of course, this crisis will bring out the best in many brave Californians; we will see a multitude of activists and even a few martyrs before it is over. The state better start building jails on every street corner because if they plan on implementing this law by force, there will be more cells holding political prisoners than criminals.

As a parent, I will not supply any documents to the school proving my child's nationality. The state can't deport thier own citizen so their gestapo tactics won't work with a huge number of people who detest this attack on innocent children.

It is gratifying to watch my teenagers and many others (who seemed to be clones of MTV) take to the streets and experience the first stirrings of political activism. What these pompous Republicans don't understand is that these West Sacramento kids (legal or illegal), White, Black, Latino, Russian or Asian, have grown up together. They don't relate to each other as taxpayers or consumers; they are friends. Young and idealistic, they are willing to stand together and, in a few short years, vote together.

Our Governor puts on his green beret and thinks attacking undocumented working families will put him on the trail to Washington. But Pete and his paunchy cronies have truly wakened a sleeping giant this time. He fondly calls his campaign workers "junkyard dogs." Well, he better get his own rabies shots because he is going to find a huge and angry pack of citizens nipping at his heels. With a little luck, they may chase him down the road, over the hill and out of the political arena forever.

I used to be impressed, while sitting in an English pub, when Britains would raise a glass of ale with a patriotic "God save the Queen." In light of this last election -- my toast to Mr. Clinton is "God save the President." I am honored to be a loyal subject to this fine and extraordinary man.

Transit needs

On November 10, the Sacramento Area Council of Governments (SACOG) held its public hearing on unmet transit need for those of us served by Sacramento's Regional Transit District.

As I continued to push for "clockwise-only" service in the less busy areas and use savings therefrom to provide "every half-hour service" and later service. I knew one young lady was there to do a term paper on public transit. Her presence caused me to wonder aloud, "Since we have had driver education in high schools for decades, perhaps it is time to include in that course some specifics on each student's local public transit potentials as how it ties into the regional picture. It is also good to know if and when one's vehicle is being repaired. For that matter, not all young folks can expect to drive a vehicle reasonably soon, due to financial and/or health reasons."

Call it another version of being "street smart," but when we live in or next to a city with some 60 or more bus routes which overlap and/or tie in with a Light Rail, being aware of the most timely connections equals making the most effective use of our time -- if we so choose. Or maybe call it "rider education."

A reminder: On November 21, SACOG will hold its meeting on unmet YoloBus needs at 2 p.m. at City Hall. So if items like later service, slight route changes, more bus benches/shelters and more timely connections with Light Rail interest you, let's see you at the meeting. If unable to attend, please call Ms. Lynn White of SACOG at 457-2264.

YOLO PUPILS MADE GOOD SHOWING IN GRAMMER GRADES

One hundred and seventeen girls and boys of Yolo County outside of Woodland have graduated from the grammar grades. In other words ninety-three per cent of the eighth grade enrollment at the close of the term were successful. This represented ninety per cent of the total enrollment at the beginning of the term. The influenza epidemic and some students moving away made up the difference.

FRUIT GROWER WILL CHANGE TO HOG PRODUCER

Sacramento, July 2.—"With the advent of the Virden Packing Company, I am going into the production of hogs and have already purchased a foundation herd of Duroc Jerseys," said Charles E. Hollister, President of the Bank of Courtland and a producer, when he accepted his appointment to the Advisory Board for the Courtland District in Sacramento County by the Virden Packing Company which is to erect and operate a $3,000,000 packing plant and union stock yards in Yolo County.

"I intend to do my bit in furnishing farm products to meet the demands of the Virden Company," he continued.

"I have been a fruit producer for a great many years, and I know the great success that has crowned Mr. Virden's efforts as a marketer of deciduous fruits, the hardest product in the world to market successfully. I also know the necessity of this packing plant. What would the productive river lands be worth to-day if we did not have canneries to take our products at our very doors. It would be just as reasonable to ship our fruit East to have it canned there as to ship our live stock there to be packed and marketed. Home markets have given us prices for our fruits 100 per cent more than before.

"It is my purpose to devote my time along lines that will aid the farmer. I know of no better means of bringing to the producer the aid that he needs than through the Virden Packing Company."

As part of the Virden Packing Company's campaign to make agriculture more profitable for the California producer, Advisory Boards of producers to assist producers in the marketing of products and in the increasing of production, particularly of cattle raising, are now being appointed in the different agricultural counties of California. In larger counties several boards will be named. The duty of these boards will be to co-operate with both the company and with the producers.

IMPROVEMENT CLUB INSTALLED OFFICERS AFTER LIVELY SESSION

Last Tuesday evening the Washington Improvement Club installed its officers for the coming year.

Those installed were: President, Mrs. E. A. Palm; Vice-President, Mrs. J. McNevin; Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. A. Parkinson; Financial Sec., Mrs. P. J. Braun; Treasurer, Mrs. E. F. Curry; Trustees, Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. F. Moser, Mrs. A. M. Cameron.

Following installations refreshments were served.

The principal subject before the meeting was the demand of the Fire Commissioners on the club to remove the club's piano from the Town Hall or pay storage.

This caused a lively tilt between some of the members with the result that a committee was appointed to go before the Board of Supervisors to find out if the Fire Commissioners owned the Town Hall.

There are two pianos now in the building that are the cause of no little gossip.

The question of moving the piano owned by the club was held over till the meeting which will be held on the first Tuesday in August.

ROAD BONDS CARRIED BY VOTE OF 10 TO 1

At the election last Tuesday, July 1st, the $40,000,000 bond issue in Yolo County carried by a vote of about 10 to 1.

The vote in Washington, although small, showed a majority of 11 to 1, the exact figures being 132 to 12.

Woodland, July 2. Yolo County, which is soon to vote $1,000,000 worth of bonds for the construction of a county highway system, voted almost ten to one in favor of the State bonds yesterday. Fifteen out of twenty-one precincts give 1174 in favor of bonds and 116 against. Woodland city voted 141 to 11.

SALOONMEN OF WASHINGTON SELL SOFT DRINKS.

Saloon owners in Washington are going along as usual since last Tuesday, apparently doing a fair business, but confidently waiting for a release they believe will soon come in the conditions governing their business.

No attempt has been made to sell intoxicating drinks.

Near beer is the strongest to be had in any of the saloons.

In the Riverbank Inn Al Zeimer is doing similarly.

Last Monday great stores of liquors were bought in all the saloons and placed in private home cellars and taken to the farms of the neighborhood.

FOUNDATION FOR FIBRE PRODUCTS PLANT IS DOWN

The concrete foundation for the first unit of the U. S. Fibre Products Company plant has been placed and construction of the frame building is to start immediately.

No delay will stop the construction of the plant, for it is the intention of its promoters to start the manufacture of fibre products and wall board on or about September 1st.

The machinery which is of a very heavy construction has already been ordered and is now on the way, except that portion which is being manufactured at the Globe Iron Works in Sacramento.

G. H. Chick, one of the promoters of the corporation, is foreman in charge of construction and is employing artisans and mechanics as he needs them. Only home mechanics are employed so long as the supply meets the demand.

The plant is located in West Sacramento between the county road and the Oakland Antioch Railroad, and in close proximity to the two great rice mills in West Sacramento.

Those who have said or may think "I do not know enough about the League of Nations to be for or against it," will have the opportunity of becoming well informed at this meeting," Friday, July 11th.

The committee in charge of arrangements are: Former Mayor, C. B. Wilcox, (Chairman); Mrs. L. D. Eckhardt, (Secretary); Mrs. S. A. Hoskins, Mrs. H. J. Shute.

ACCUSED OF ASSAULT ON 8-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Before Judge Barry this forenoon John Crosco answered to the charge of felonious assault on an 8-year-old Japanese girl which was committed last Friday in the brush north of Rocky Point.

From information at hand it seems he enticed the girl from Sacramento and several of the local boys heard him promising her money and candy in order to accomplish his purpose.

At the time of going to press the trial had not started.

BANK SUES TO CLOSE ESTATE OF W. E. LOVDAL

The California National Bank filed a petition in the Superior Court yesterday asking that Ovedia A. White, Emma T. Beardslee and Katherine B. Fish, executrices in the estate of William E. Lovdal, be removed because they are neglecting to bring a final settlement of the estate.

The petition asks that they be removed and some one appointed in order to wind up the affairs of the property. The bank claims that the estate is indebted to them for $110,000 on unsecured claims. The bank estimates the property worth from $75,000 to $125,000.

VFW hosts state commander, others

From West Sacramento V.F.W. Auxiliary Post 8762

The West Sacramento Veterans of Foreign Wars and its Auxiliary was honored to receive the Department of California's State Commander, Richard Pignone, and the Auxiliary State President, Fran Swanson, on November 4. They had a very busy schedule to keep. This was the official visit to the 17th District, which covers five counties. First stop Friday, November 4, was the V.A. Clinic on Broadway and Stockton Blvd. A check for $1200 was donated to the clinic through our volunteer hospital dontions. The VFW tries to cover every facility in the 25 districts. They travel all over the state, mainly to make sure everything is going along okay and that veterans are not losing touch with their benefits.

They headed back south at noon after the district meeting that was held Saturday, November 5.

Richard Eubank, District Commander, and Judy Moore, District Auxiliary President, were the escorts.

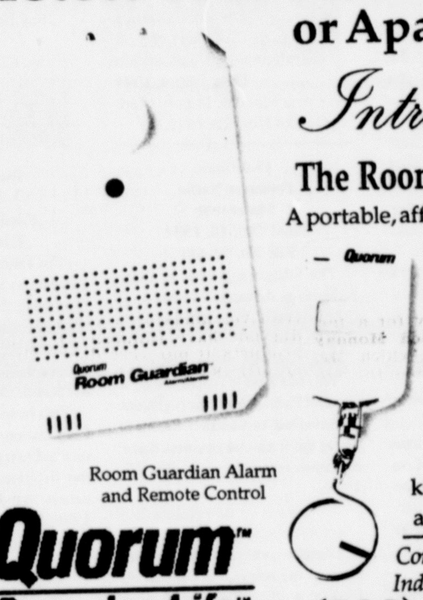

Fran Swanson, Floy Gleason and Judy Moore

Residents should be aware of rules regarding leaf collection, street sweeping

From the City of West Sacramento

The fall leaf season is again upon us. Your cooperation during this period will greatly improve the city's ability to maintain streets and storm drains.

The city street crew will pick up only the leaves and tree limbs that fall directly onto the street. They will not pick up leaves, brush, or grass cuttings which have been raked into the street or otherwise removed from a yard or lot and placed into the street. The street sweeper will sweep around any piles found on the street.

All leaves, grass clippings, brush, tree limbs, and other refuse originating behind the street curb must be placed in garbage cans, bags, or other containers or tied in bundles and placed at the curb for pick-up on refuse day. This service is a part of the regular monthly refuse collection rate, and there is no additional charge. Bundles must not be greater in dimension than 3 feet by 3 feet or weigh more than 40 pounds.

Twice a month street sweeping, in the residential areas of the city, will begin on November 21, 1994, for the leaf season. Once all the leaves have fallen, street sweeping will return to a once a month schedule. Removal of parked vehicles from the street on the days the street sweeper is in your area would allow better cleaning.

Remember -- refuse originating in your yard is your responsibility. Your cooperation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

would be Southport residents, who would have less reason to cross the bridge to do their shopping. The other 40 percent of the customers would cross the Jefferson Blvd. bridge to shop at Cheaper. The net result, the new study says, would be a one percent reduction in total bridge traffic if the store is built.

"I would be very surprised they could even contemplate approval of a conditional use permit at this time, because the first study was so inadequate," said Amegin. "It's hard to see how they could do a whole new study so fast."

Another feature of the store would be diesel and gasoline fuel pumps.

Planner Beth Tincher said the planning commission has a fair amount of leeway in dealing with the company's application for a conditional use permit.

"They could find that liquor sales are degrading to the integrity of a neighborhood, or that they are desirable and convenient to a community. Whether or not liquor sales are desirable is an issue that could be debated for quite a while. It really is a judgment call for the planning commission."

About a quarter mile south of the proposed Cheaper! site (which is at the juncture of Jefferson Blvd. and Linden Rd. south) is another mini-market, Shirley's Deli. The owner of Shirley's voiced a concern about the viability of her business if Cheaper! comes in. But Tincher's staff report mentions that it is not the job of city officials to make judgment based on market competition issues.

As for design issues, the store would not be covered by design guidelines in the new Southport Framework Plan.

"We do have a sign code, a landscape code, etc.," said Tincher. "But the development standards for the framework plan only maintain that within new villages, a theme be established and the new theme be carried out throughout public buildings in that area. Since this is an existing development area, no theme exists."

ney General, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

United States Secretary of Education Richard Riley has previously agreed with California's Legislative Counsel and advised state officials that education agencies violating FERPA would jeopardize any federal funds they receive. In addition, because violation of FERPA would put the reporting requirement of Proposition 187 in conflict with federal law, it might be preempted by the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution and, thus, unenforceable.

In addition, the California Department of Education General Counsel issued an opinion on October 18, 1994, which pointed out that school boards would have to specify which district employees have a duty to carry out any obligation assigned to "school districts" by Proposition 187. That opinion also stated that failure to carry out a duty once specified would subject an individual to potential criminal, economic, and professional sanctions.

Finally, the United States Department of Justice advised President Clinton that Proposition 187 was similar to the Texas statute which was ruled unconstitutional in Plyler v. Doe (1982) 457 U.S. 202. Even the authors of Proposition 187, Mr. Alan C. Nelson and Mr. Hal Elzell, agree that the initiative is unconstitutional under Plyler but hope to get Plyler reconsidered and reversed.

Considerations

Before deciding to take action to implement Proposition 187's verification and reporting requirements commencing January 1, 1995, school districts should carefully consider at least the following:

■ The status of any litigation regarding Proposition 187 that has been filed in the interim including, in particular, the position of the United States government regarding federal preemption and the termination of federal funds to state and local education agencies.

■ The likelihood of litigation directly against the school district to require it to either carry out or refrain from carrying out the provisions of Proposition 187. (See in particular the discussion in footnote 3 of the California Department of Education General Counsel's opinion of October 18, 1994).

■ The economic impact to the school district in implementing the provisions of Proposition 187, absent being judicially required to do so. This would include the potential loss of federal funds, the collective bargaining impact of any new requirements imposed on personnel, and any potential liability for improper implementation.

■ Any possible repercussions to school district personnel charged with enforcing any part of Proposition 187. This would include an evaluation of criminal, disciplinary and credentialing sanctions, as well as the possibility of individual liability based on privacy and civil rights infringement.

Conclusion

I urge caution and deliberation prior to taking any action. The K-12 education community has a window of opportunity not afforded other entities affected by the initiative. Much more will be known by January 1, 1995, when commencement of verification is mandated. My staff will continue to keep you informed about any new developments. . .

I have neither the authority nor the intent to take any action against school districts which decide at this time not to implement Proposition 187.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — two of clubs.

Appearances can be very deceiving. For example, take this deal where West leads a club against three notrump. East wins with the ace and returns the six of clubs to declarer's king.

Looking at all four hands it might seem that South must go down one, since he has only eight tricks to cash. East, at the same time, appears destined to score four club tricks and the ace of diamonds.

But bridge is a peculiar game, and South can easily make three notrump by pursuing perfectly normal line of play. All he has to do after winning the club return at trick two is to cash his four heart tricks right away, which is certainly a very simple thing to do.

Let's examine East's plight as the hearts are led. He has no problem on the second and third rounds of hearts, on which he discards the 9-8 of diamonds.

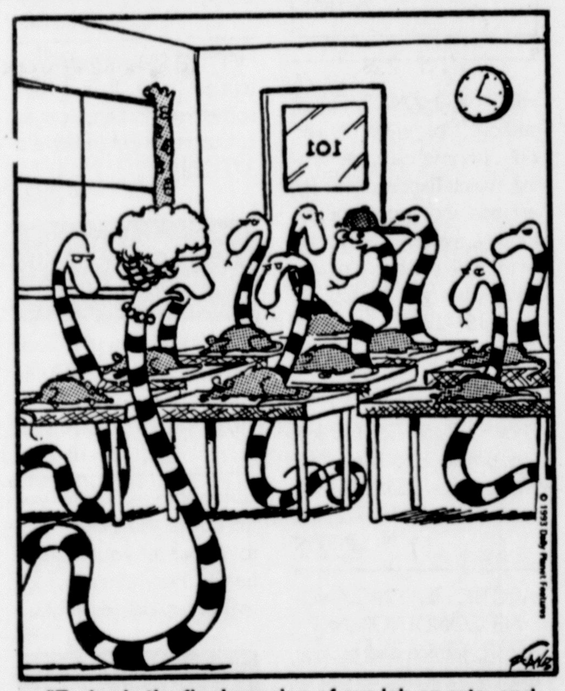

But when declarer cashes dummy's last heart, East suddenly acquires a king-sized headache that not even the largest aspirin in the world can cure.

If he discards a spade, declarer cashes four spades. And if East decides to discard a club instead, declarer simply leads a diamond from dummy toward his king. Either way, South makes nine tricks.

Perhaps there ought to be a law to stop a declarer from flimflamming the enemy out of a trick in this fashion. But, until that day arrives, resourceful declarers will continue to do their opponents out of their due.
